THE INCOME TAX IN ENGLAND

A Comparison-The English System. The London Times has the following interest-

The London Times has the following interesting article:—

"The rival systems of taxation in Great Britain and the United States have been repeatedly contrasted by our statesmen and financiers, but the comparison can be carried more closely now than was possible either before the civil war or immediately after that desperate struggle. The estimates, in fact, originally proposed by the American Secretary of the Treasury for the year ending with the current month comprised a revenue not greatly differing from that of our own Government. Instead of our £70,000,000, the Americans were to raise £79,000,000, while on the other side of the sheet they provide £28,000,000 for interest on the national debt, instead of the £28,000,000 which suffers for that obligation in our own case. Nor did their civil service estimate differ materially from ours, though their charges for army and navy were considerably simaller; but the point of greatest contrast was in the surplus. The scheme proposed an excess of income over expendium amounting to no less than £20,000,000, and Mr. Gladstone observed in a recent debate that America had actually in the space of sixteen months paid off £40,000,000 of public debt out of the proceeds of taxation. Whether this, in poly of sound finance, was judicious polley has been doubted, and it now appears, at all events, that the effort has been carried far enough at present. The reduction of the debt has been suspended, and certain returns which have just been discussed in our American correspondence show very plainly that the ability to endure heavy taxation has been diminished. In plain words, we are told that the aggregate rarticle:to endure heavy taxation has been diminished. In plain words, we are told that the aggregate amount of incomes assessed for income tax has allen off by fifty per cent, from the amount of the previous year.

"We should observe, perhaps, at the outset, that income in America is taxed separately from properly, so that the sum realized for the treasury under the head of income tax is not equivalent to the single item of property and income tax in our own accounts. The rate of taxation in the United States is five per cent., or, by our method of reckoning, one stilling in the pound, which is levied upon all sums above two hundred pounds. This was expected to produce eight million pounds sterling, but we are told that a diminution to the extent of onehalf most be anticipated, on account of the general decline of trade and profits in the States. It happens, too, that this decline can be accurately traced and estimated, for the cusbe accurately traced and estimated, for the custom prevalls in America of publishing the returns made by taxpayers under this head. In this manner the whole public are invited to act as assessors, and the truth of the returns is left to be tested by opinion and belief. The collectors allege that evasion is universally practised, and that complete returns are rarely made. Nevertheless, the publicity given to such facts is evidently gratifying to the national curiosity, and the incomes of men of various classes and callings are made the subject of comparison and comment.

various classes and callings are made the subject of comparison and comment.

"Last year there was a New York merchant who returned his income at £800,000 and upwards, and his return is still the largest in the fore us, though it has dwindled to less list us. Another New York merchant than £150,000.

£85,000, and a New York comes second with its also a large shareshipowner, who, howeves, "meany follows.

than £150,000. £85,000, and a New York comes second with its also a large share-shipowher, who, howeves, impany, follows holder in the Atlantic Cable — Delmonico, with £80,000. After these comes — offits the well-known restaurateur, whose parents are above £40,000. In Philadelphia a Government loan agent, whose gains had been £130,000, finds them reduced, not unnaturally, to about a third of that sum. In Chicago £34,000 realized by a of that sum. In Chicago £34,000 realized by a maker of agricultural implements represents the largest return; after which comes an income of £14,000. These items owe most of their interest to the figures alone, but there are others which are a supervised by the figures alone, but there are others. interest to the figures alone, but there are others which are remarkable from the celebrity of the establishments or individuals to which they refer. General Grant possesses a private income of about £000 a year over and above his pay of £3600; Mr. Stanton has just £700 besides his salary of £1600; Mr. Matthew T. Brennan, the well-known New York politician, has £2000 a year; Mr. Frederick Douglass, the famous New York negro, £1200; and Mr. Frank-lin Plerce, ex-President of the United States, £1000. Journalism in America is a profitable profession, though the income of Mr. James Gordon Bennett, of the New York Herald, has fallen from upwards of £30,000 to less than £24,000. The publisher of the Boston Journal returns £14,000, and Mr. Patrick Donahue realizes £4000 from an Irish paper, the Boston Pilot. The incomes returned by academical and literary men are moderate. Professor Agassiz has £600 a year; Mr. Richard H. Dana, £400; Professor 1800 a year; Mr. Richard H. Dana, 2400; Professor Lowell, £500; and the poet Longfellow, £2000. Publishers, as might be expected, do better than authors; one firm returning as much as £20,000 a year, and another £10,000. The petroleum trade gives £30,000 per anuam to its leading member, and a manufacturer of American watches returns £25,000.

"The most remarkable feature of these financial statistics as compared with our own translation to the year's is undoubtedly the abrupt decline in the year's returns. No such event has occurred in this country since the first revival of the tax by Sir Robert Peel, and of late the increase of yield has been strong and permanent. A penny in the pound was calculated by Mr. Gladstone some time ago to produce £1,000,000 a year; it now produces £1,500,000; nor is there any reason to suppose that the growth will be arrested. But it should be remembered that the circum-stances of the two countries are widely different. the Americans, almost ignorant of taxation ten years ago, suddenly found themselves involved in a costly war and encumbered with a prodigious debt. They accepted an incredible burden of taxation, rendered endurable at first by an inflated and fictitious prosperity. Soon, however, followed the reaction, of which, besides the evidence conveyed in these returns, we see other symptoms in the derangement of trade, the quarrels between masters and men, and the suspension of labor in various branches of industry. Probably the returns of an income tax in America would never be quite so come tax in America would never be quite so regular as our own, which are steadled by the conjunction of property with income, and are exposed to less violent fluctuations of enterprise and credit. The statistics of this year, however, must necessarily be regarded as exceptional. It is a year of collapse after inflation and the wonder is not that the public come from this source should have failen off, that so immense a revenue should still be rised.
